The giant puppets of Walter and Marion Griffin were commissioned by members of the CASTLECRAG PROGRESS ASSOCIATION. The puppets were originally created for a theatre piece protesting against the closure and sale of Castlecrag infants' school. The giant Griffin puppets were also used in rallies, community events and other theatre productions. Subsequently, the puppets were donated to the National Museum of Australia. Currently the puppets are displayed in the Landmarks Exhibition at the Australian Museum.

Prominent sculptor BIM HILDER put on puppet shows for the children in Castlecrag from 1940s to 1970.
